This week the Catholic Church focuses on migrants and refugees. This documentary was made with the assistance of the Asylum Seeker Centre in Sydney and Dandenong, Good Shepherd Sisters, the Asylum Seeker Resource Centre in Melbourne, the Christian Brothers and Actors for Refugees. They combine with the Brigidine Asylum Seekers Project and Jesuit Refugee Service to reflect on the effects of government policy on asylum seekers.

“Me and a Camera + 70 Million Locals”

Caritas Australia is the Catholic Church’s official aid and development agency for the world’s poor. It belongs to the largest network of humanitarian relief agencies in the world, and is among the big five in Australia. One of Caritas’ works is to educate young people about development issues in the third world. This film from Albert Street Productions makes the journey with a group of Catholic secondary students as they expose themselves to poverty in the Philippines, and to the reality of most people’s lives in the world.

“El Salvador: Seeds of Liberty”

One of the most Catholic countries in the world is El Salvador, and this week they celebrate their national independence day. Recently it has had a violent and sad history and in this film we see the story of how in 1980, soldiers in El Salvador murdered four American women. The woman, two Maryknoll Sisters, an Ursuline nun and a volunteer from Cleveland, lived and worked among the country's poor. Their stand for justice sowed seeds of freedom El Salvador in enjoying today.

“The Vanishing Garden”

The environmental movement is not a recent phenomenon. This film looks at how the Book of Genesis and the Letters of St Paul speak about our need to be good stewards of creation, and care for the earth. This week as Australia focuses on World Clean Day, it's timely for us to look at the spiritual and moral dimensions to our vanishing garden.

This week the Catholic Church celebrates the feast of St Wenceslas. The only thing most of us know about this saint is that from the carol "Good King Wenceslas." He is the patron of the Czech Republic. During the communist rule, the Catholic Church in Czechoslovakia had to become an underground church. In this film we see the religious context from which many people fled as they made their way to Australia.
